Yes, there is a UI error in the screenshot. The text on the page states "For your account security, logging into Facebook from an embedded browser is disabled. To continue, download and log into the Facebook app on your device and try again." However, the page was expected to show an option for logging into Facebook based on the user's action sequence, which is not present. Instead, the user is blocked from logging in with an error message, indicating a potential discrepancy or error in the application flow related to account security settings.
